THE DAILY INDEPENDENT.

VOL. 5. NO. 81 — MONESSEN, PA., FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1906. — SIX CENTS THE WEEK

RACE BETWEEN "NEWSIES" STEADILY GROWS HOTTER.

Youngsters Have Gotten Down to Work in Earnest and Subscriptions are Piling in as the Results are About Evenly Matched.

The race between the Daily's "Newsies" is now on in earnest and the youngsters are putting forth their best efforts to get a lead and hold it. The novel idea of furnishing the boys with caps has been the means of arousing a deeper interest than ever and the little fellows are taking hold of the project with renewed vigor.

As the enthusiasm which the Independent's offer created, increases the newsboy staff also grows and now light new full fledged newsies are selling the Daily. Each of the boys has provided himself with a very creditable list of subscribers and the way they are going after more, signifies that there will be a warm struggle before the winners are named. As yet neither of them has any decided advantage and the lad at the bottom today may head the list tomorrow. Today several citizens telephoned in their subscriptions and had them placed to the credit of their favorite.

In this manner the boys are succeeding in rapidly increasing their lists. Interest in the contest is growing steadily.

The music store on Donner avenue of W. F. Frederick is being extensively repaired. It is being newly painted and papered, new lettering is being put on the windows and altogether the place is taking on an entirely new appearance. Mr. Frederick will also enlarge his business in the very near future by putting in a new and additional line of musical instruments, such as horns clarionetts, violins, etc.

Three car loads of pianos have been shipped and are now on the way to Monessen and will arrive within the next few days at which time Mr. Frederick will be able to show the most complete stock since his location here. Up to the present time he has enjoyed a most liberal patronage and has placed in this community many musical instruments all of which seem to be giving entire satisfaction. The firm is a responsible one and those who extend patronage will be accorded fair and honest treatment. DALE TROUBLE BROUGHT OUT BEFORE COMMISSIONER

Phil. K. Shaner Appointed by the Court, and Witnesses Were Heard Yesterday at A. M. Wyant's Office.

Phil. K. Schauer, of Greensburg, was the commissioner appointed by the court to take testimony in the suit for divorce of Matilda Dale, of Monessen, against her husband, George H. Dale. It will be remembered by Independent readers that Mr. and Mrs. Dale got into a dispute about ten days ago over their children. It finally wound up in a kidnapping and two of the boys got lost in Pittsburg after leaving their father. The testimony was heard at A. M. Wyant's office yesterday afternoon and according to the evidence of Mr. Dale and his witnesses there is a man in the case and there are witnesses which brought out some evidence of a rather spicy order. A. M. Wyant is attorney for Mrs. Dale and Daniel Reamer is acting for the husband and both attorneys defended their clients in an able manner. Mr. Shaner will now make his return and recommendation to court and a divorce may be granted or a jury trial be requested.

DR. IMBERG UNDER BOND

Arrested Today for Practicing in the State Without First Obtaining a License.

Dr. H. Imberg was arrested this morning at the instigation of Chief of Police Woolsey and was arraigned before Squire James A. Watkins but a hearing was waived and the doctor gave bail in the sum of $300 for his appearance at the next term of court. Dr. Imberg is a Finlander and came to Monessen a few weeks ago from Illinois and became an assistant to Dr. Wittebeck and commenced the practice of medicine. Chief of police Woolsey brought suit against the man for practicing in the state without a license. The laws of the state require a person after graduating to have a certificate from the state board of examiners and to be registered with the prothonotary of the county. This Chief Woolsey claims has not been done and consequently the suit was brought.

Immediately after his arrest Dr. Imberg went to Pittsburg for the purpose of employing an attorney and says he will fight the case.

The British Toastmaster.

The British banquet differs from the American only in that the chairman presides, but does not keep order or announce the toasts. That is attended to by a professional toastmaster, who is a large person with a volcanic voice. While the guests are assembling he stands at the doorway and announces the names of the arrivals, who are then greeted by the chairman and passed into the push. When the guests are seated he takes up his station behind the chair of the presiding officer and commands order in these terms: "My lords and gentlemen, I pray you silence. We will now listen to the toast to his imperial majesty the German emperor, responded to by his excellency the lord chancellor." For the rest the speeches drawl and drag, as in New York, with now and then a sparkle of wit or a flash of mental energy, usually from some unexpected quarter. The turtle soup is no better than ours. The toastmaster gets $10 for a night's work. New York World.

Baron Hubner went one evening to call upon President Thiers, who was then at the head of the French republic. The baron found the door of the house open and walked upstairs. In the dim light a man crept stealthily toward him. Knowing that the president went in fear of his life and, unwilling to die a martyr in a cause not his own, the baron hurriedly explained, "I am not M. Thiers." "I know that you are not M. Thiers," answered the mysterious stranger, "but I want to know who you are." Before answering the baron insisted upon knowing the identity of his companion. "Oh, I am M. Thiers' butler," was the answer. Hubner declared himself. "Ah," said the butler, with a sigh of relief, "I have your name first on the list of visitors." Each had taken the other for an assassin.

Worked the Tigers.

Near Perak, in the Malay peninsula, is a prosperous rubber factory run by a long headed Scotchman. In order to obtain the sap from which the rubber is made it is necessary to puncture the bark of the trees. Laborers are scarce in that district, but there is an abundance of tigers. There were not enough men to "tap" the trees, but the Scotch proprietor hit on a brilliant idea. He knew that tigers are fond of valerian, so he gave orders that all the trees should be rubbed with this stuff. The tigers came up and caressingly scratched the bark in the most approved herringbone fashion, after which all that the coolies had to do was to walk around once a day and collect the rubber.

Aromatic Petit Larceny.

"I hope you notice how sweet I am," smiled the girl when they were out on the street again. "While the man was wrapping up the toothbrush I was trying all the perfume on the counter He looked at me awfully hard."

"I should think he would have had you arrested," remarked her companion severely. "What if everybody tried all the perfumes like that? How much would he have left to sell?"—New York Press.

Like a Dog Watch.

Mamma had not noticed the clock striking during all of the afternoon and, thinking perhaps it had stopped she asked little Rita to go into the hall and see if it was running. After a hasty survey of the long pendulum swinging back and forth, Rita ran back and announced: "Why, no, mamma, it isn't running. It's standing still and wagging its tail."—Harper's Weekly.

A Helpful Wife.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said the after dinner orator, "unaccustomed as I am to public speaking, and having been suddenly called upon without the slightest notice, I am—er—exceedingly—er"—

"Why, John," said his wife from the other end of the table, "have you forgot the rest? You said it all right this morning."

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Traverse City, Mich., says: "For twenty years I was doctoring for kidney and liver trouble but without benefit. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My skin was disfigured by spots of dreadful figures. The kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular, and I was tortured with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed 100 pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

ROBBING A HAUNTED HOUSE

(Original.)

"One of my most singular experiences," said the burglar, "was when I was new at the business, and it came pretty near making an honest man of me. At the time we were 'doing' a suburb of a big city. Every few nights some house would be entered, and every one in the place was badly frightened. One night I was on the way to join my pals for a bit of work when I passed a house that struck me as being well located for business. There was not another house near enough to afford any protection, and there were porches with trellises that would enable a man to climb to the second story. I saw one such ladder that led right up to a back window, and as the night was very hot the window was wide open. It was too dead easy a game to be left out and I had time to make a haul before joining the gang.

"I took the precaution to walk around the house to look out for anything that might look like me. There wasn't a light anywhere. On the front porch a short board leaned against the front door on which something had been painted in rough black letters. I brought my bullseye to bear on it, and when I saw what it was I laughed. It read: 'This house is haunted! Keep off!'

"If ever there was a woman's bluff that was. No man would have been stupid enough to try to fool a burglar in that way. I made up my mind there were only women in the house and I had nothing to fear. Going straight to the trellis I climbed it and entered by the open window. About this time I felt a trifle uncertain. It occurred to me that any one so frightened as to put up such a warning to burglars would be timid enough to shut and lock all the windows. But there was a heat wave on and no one could have stood it without outside air. This led me to believe that the sign had been put up in place of locking the windows. I laughed again at the device and proceeded down a hall from which the window opened. At the other end of the hall was a mirror. The night was not so dark but that I could see my reflection and I stood for a moment looking at it.

"I don't know anything I'd not rather run up against in my work than a mirror. If it was day and I could see distinctly I wouldn't mind 'em. But I have never done day work, which no gentleman will do, for it is really common sneak thief work. To make sure the reflection was mine, I made different motions, noticing that the reflection followed them. It did and I was satisfied.

"I tried several bedroom doors and they were locked. Not caring to disturb any one this, mind you, was a side issue before joining the gang—I concluded to go downstairs and see what had been done with the silver. The places where silver are usually kept were empty, and I knew they had put it in a safe place. Then I concluded to go on the third story and if I didn't find anything I'd have to either leave without plunder or break into some of the best bedrooms on the second floor.

"Reaching the second floor on my way up there was the mirror and my dim reflection. I raised an arm mostly out of nervousness, for I had made the test before and I shivered all over when I didn't see the arm of the reflection go up. Grasping my revolver, I stepped back and aside. The figure stepped aside too. I raised my revolver. So did the figure. Then I felt easier and advancing found that from where I had stood the mirror wasn't high enough to take in my arm raised above my head.

"There's a bit of superstition in all of us, and the incident rattled me. When I got on the third floor I felt uncomfortable. I saw something at the end of the hall that might be a mirror, but it was darker than below and I couldn't see my reflection. I entered a bedroom and found a fine haul of jewels on a bureau. By this time I was quite ready to get away and stepping into the hall was about to go downstairs when I thought I saw something in what I supposed was the mirror. My hair stood on end. It was white and my clothes were dark. I looked at it a moment, then as a test put up both my arms. Both arms of the reflection went up. I put mine down, but those of the reflection remained up. My heart began to thump. Then the figure stepped out of the mirror and came toward me. I gave a yell and fell in a faint.

"When I came to myself I was locked in a closet, and a few minutes later the police arrived. The closet door was unlocked, and a policeman's bullseye was thrust in my face.

"'Hello, Andy! Caught again? Why, I didn't know you was out.' And he dragged me from the closet.

"The gas was turned on, and there were several women in the hall. All were in double gowns except one girl, who had a sheet around her. The first thing I did was to look at the end of the hall, where I supposed there was a mirror, and there wasn't any mirror there. Then I knew the girl in white had fooled me.

"The policeman congratulated the women on their pluck in dragging me to the closet before I came to myself, and they split their sides laughing when talking about the notice that the house was haunted. I didn't join my pals for another haul. I slept the rest of the night at the station and later took up my abode for five years behind permanent bars.

"I've done some good work since I served my term for that fluke, but I take no chances on what looks like a mirror."

NATHAN WHITE HOWE.

Will Change the Arrangement

"Her Only Sin."

We look to New York for new theatrical ventures during the forefront of the season, and to Chicago for new pieces in the Spring of each year. Lincoln J. Carter's production of "Her Only Sin," a strong emotional play of English life, occupied the proud position among the Chicago novelties as the only successful drama given there at the close of last season. The rest of the producing theatres were given over to the rage for musical skits and extravaganzas.
